Property from the Bernhard Floedl collection

LOTS 359-423

“Bernhard Floedl was born in Graz, Austria in 1965, settled in Manila in 1985, but all along kept a second residence in Austria.”

Until the mid-1990s he worked as an actor on various B-movies and during this time was able to perform with well-known stars like Chuck Norris, Richard Harris, Donald Pleasance, Susan Sarandon, Robert Davi and Richard Hatch, just to name a few.

Aside from being a well established collector of Philippine Tribal Antiquities since the 1980's, he also later became an avid collector of contemporary art and has since built an impressive collection of European and South East Asian pieces.

He appeared in 30 International productions and some locally produced films as a supporting actor, but also did 3 films in which he had second lead roles.

While staying in contact with Hollywood insiders he later became a business man and worked as a trading consultant in close contact with major Philippine Corporations like Philippine Airlines.

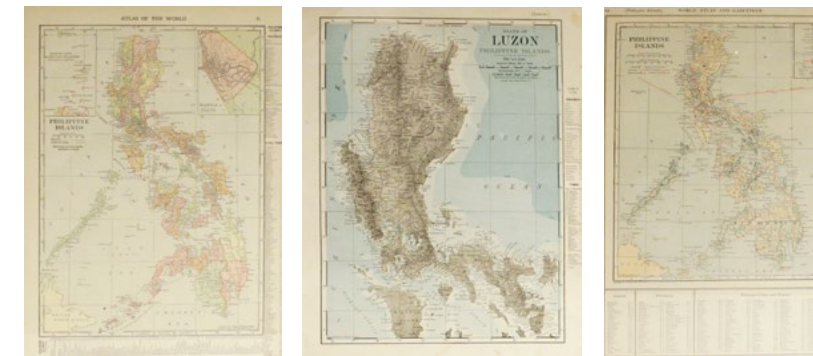

Through the last 30 years Bernhard Floedl also indulged in vintage American muscle car restoration as a hobby restoring priceless American muscle cars and building a collection. As a die-hard cinema enthusiast he never lost his passion for film.

As he encountered some young, talented Filipino filmmakers he decided to venture into writing, producing and co-directing his first full length documentary which was released internationally in 2016 entitled “MotiV8tion”.

The Rose Litton Necklace

“When Rose Litton was a young woman, a palm reader told her that she had the luckiest star she had ever seen. Indeed she had a lucky star.”

She came from the town of Dinalupihan in Bataan where she lived in poverty but didn't know it. “I didn't know I was poor. I never knew anything else. So I was happy.”

She married George Litton, an immigrant from Hong Kong, around 1920. George Litton became one of the first industrialists of the Philippines in the early 50's. She and her husband were business soulmates. Together they built a family business that allowed her to buy some of the pieces that are placed on auction.

Many stories circulated in Manila regarding the purchases of Mrs. Litton. Some were true, but most were not. One of the stories told was about a visit to Harry Winston, the famed jeweler from New York. She and her daughter had a private meeting with Mr. Winston. Her daughter asked Mr. Winston, “You are surrounded with all this beautiful jewelry. What is your most valuable piece?” Mr. Winston opened a drawer and pulled out a picture frame with a photo of a woman and two young boys. He pointed to the photo of his family and said, “These are my most valuable treasures.”

Another story that was being told in Manila society was how Mrs. Litton went to a jewelry store and asked to see a pearl necklace. She was shown a $20,000 pearl necklace. She told the sales clerk, Do you know who I am? I am Mrs. George Litton. Show me a better necklace.”

The jeweler proceeded to show her a $40,000 necklace. “Show me another one.” Out came the $80,000 necklace. She settled for a $60,000 one.

The former incident really occurred; the latter did not. Yet these rumors persisted because she had this mystique about her. She was the rags to riches story that inspired people, caused them to admire her and at the same time tell stories about her as if she were a legend.

She was.

signed and dated 1964 (verso)

Provenance
Graham Gallery, New York

Mario Yrisarry sprayed and stenciled his canvases with acrylic paint or drew right on the support with Prismacolor, exploring non-traditional, non-brush methods of applying pigment during the 1960s and 70s in New York. Inspired by jazz music, his linear applications of paint with combinations of hard and soft edges within the same composition created lyrical abstractions while his canvas-filling patterns produced a rhythm and beat. Yrisarry exhibited regularly with Graham Gallery and O.K. Harris Works of Art as well as at the Park Place Gallery in New York. His work was included in many important exhibitions: Painting Without A Brush, Institute of Contemporary Art, Boston, 1965; Whitney Biennial, New York, 1970; Painting and Sculpture Today, Indianapolis Museum of Art, 1970; Using Walls, Jewish Museum, 1970; Spray, Santa Barbara Museum of Art, 1971; The Structure of Color, Whitney Museum, NY, 1971; Grids, Institute of Contemporary Art, Philadelphia, 1972. His artwork is in many private and public collections, including: Joseph Hirshhorn Collection, Washington, DC; Whitney Museum of American Art, NY; Baltimore Museum of Art, Maryland; Indianapolis Museum of Art, Indiana; Larry Aldrich Museum, Ridgefield, Connecticut; Museum of Art, Carnegie Institute, Pittsburgh; among others. Yrisarry was born in Manila, Philippines and studied at Queens College and Cooper Union in New York. He stopped painting and exhibiting in 1977. David Richard Gallery is now exhibiting and representing Yrisarry and his important artworks.

In Long Live Peace, a ring of happy people dance around a tree to celebrate the end of war beneath Picasso's beloved dove of peace. This print is a simple black-on-white created with lines, silhouettes and symbolism. It's a dreamy piece of art that's lovely to look at and repeat the message of.

The six door display cabinet was part of a set of matching furniture ordered by the late President Quirino while he was in office in Malacanang. Among the matching pieces was a king-size bed and a dining table that could seat twelve people. The bed alone cost P 5,000 in the late forties. After World War II, this was a scandalous amount to the populace who were still recovering from the devastation of Manila. The President was criticized for being such a spendthrift that he backed out of purchasing these pieces of furniture. A well known interior decorator named Marina Rios was commissioned to sell these pieces for President Quirino. Mrs. Rose Litton purchased the dining table and the display cabinet. She filled the cabinet with silver and crystal which she often used when she had her lavish parties at her mansion in San Juan. President Diosdado Macapagal was a frequent guest at her parties and even claimed to be a relative of Mrs. Litton as they both spoke Kapangpangan.
